Care & Maintenance

MARS Quartz is a low maintenance, stain resistant material, due to its low porosity and low absorption features it doesn't maintain moisture, and it doesn't require regular sealing or other treatments.

Follow these tips for daily cleaning. Access the full care and maintenance guide on our website where you will find recommendations to keep your surface clean and avoid any damage from food, heat and other substances.

For daily cleaning, we recommend:

- Bar Keeper Friend Stone Cleaner & Polish
- Weiman Quartz Clean & Shine
- Stain Proof Daily Countertop Cleaner

DO

- Wipe any spills that may occur as soon as possible using water and a soft cloth.
- To reanimate dry stains use warm water and let it sit before wiping.
- Use dish soap or a mild degreaser, if necessary.
- Use large, circular motions to clean the spot and surrounding area.
- Test cleaning solutions on a small, inconspicuous area first for any adverse reaction.
- Make sure your surface is completely dry after cleaning.
- Always use cutting boards and trivets.

DON'T

- Scrub. Use a soft cloth or sponge, avoid abrasive pads to prevent visible damage like scratches and dull spots,
- Use more pressure than the natural weight of your hand as to not create dull spots from overworking the surface.
- Contact with sharp objects. Always use a chopping board to prevent damage to your surface.
- Long exposure to chemicals. Immediately wipe off any substance from your surface as it may cause damage like discoloration or chemical patina.
- Exposure to heat. While MARS Quartz is heat resistant, always use a trivet or pad before placing hot objects on you surface.
- Natural stone cleaners. MARS Quartz is an engineered material, designed to optimize the characteristics of natural stone like aesthetics and durability. However, it does not have the same chemical composition or porosity as natural stones like marble and granites therefore the cleaners designed for natural stone will have adverse effects on engineered quartz.
